The first application I found that does what I want in finding a way to write for the internet at the same time as my other work. With CreaWriter you can write a post in a variety of ways from the website itself, but you can also go to the desktop, Windows, Android, or iOS app. There are more ways to write a post, add photos and videos, draw with the pen tool, or even access Twitter and Facebook. It is simple and free to use, and you can write a post at the same time as you are browsing the internet, or even checking your other apps. To start writing your post, just open the app and it will present you with a blank page. This page is fairly large, so I would recommend using it in full screen view. The application is not overly intrusive, although there is a menu with some options at the top of the page. You can change the size of the background, change the type and color of the font, change the text size and the background color, change the pen color, etc. After you have made all of the choices you want to make, you can write a post. As you write, you can click the arrow below the page to switch to writing on the left side or the right side of the screen. You can also copy and paste the text from the left side of the screen to the right side. For best results when you are writing your post, I recommend that you stay with the full screen mode as much as possible. In this view, you are working from a white background, which makes the text easy to see. At the top of the screen is a Menu, with a bunch of options like "Exit" or "New Post" or "Edit Post". To add photos or videos, just click on the "Insert Photo/Video" option, and it will open the photo/video file manager. From there, you can add a photo or video, as well as crop and resize it if you like. Finally, you can add a link to a website or other page, and even a list of links. Once you are finished adding text and pictures, you can finally make the post live, with a preview button. You can publish your post immediately, or you can wait a while for the application to check it for errors and to make it live. If it does not appear to have errors, you can click "Publish" to make the post go live. If you are looking for
